The Rev. John E. Friel, a native of the Republic of Ireland, was informed that he was being removed from a New Hampshire ministry as of July 5, said the Rev. Michael Lopes, a diocesan spokesman. The diocese issued a brief statement confirming Friel's removal and said it was a routine matter as he had been reassigned to be auxiliary bishop in New York. Until Thursday, the diocese had given no reason for the removal, or any other change in Friel's duties. His reassignment will take effect at the end of the summer, when he will retire from the priesthood and begin his new duties. The St. Patrick's Cathedral parish in Nashua was among those whose priests were reassigned, Lopes said. The conservative diocese that had been run by Cardinal Bernard F. Law since the mid-1980s announced last week that Friel had been accused by a woman of having a sexual relationship with her during the 1990s, when he was a priest in the church in the Bronx, where she was a parishioner. The diocese said Friel admitted to the relationship to diocesan authorities. Law, who was elevated to cardinal by Pope John Paul II in November, is the highest-ranking member of the Roman Catholic Church to be embroiled in a clergy sex-abuse scandal. Last month, Law was accused of covering up the sexual abuse of a boy by a priest he had ordained in Ireland in the 1980s. Law has publicly apologized for his actions, but has also denied knowledge of the priest's sexual molestation. The Rev. Brian Caffrey, assistant pastor of St. Patrick's and the cathedral, said it was a painful but routine routine. "We're very used

What's new in Lighton:

The lightons are a group of six highly active nuclei in a region of outer space approximately 11,000 to 11,500 light years from Earth, near the star Antares. A group of light-collecting telescopes used so far are the Antares Collaboration, Great Observatories Origins Deep Survey (GOODS), Spitzer Space Telescope, Hubble Space Telescope (HST), Gemini North, Vatican Advanced Technology Telescope (VATT), Gemini South, Submillimeter Array (SMA), and the Integral Field Unit (IFU) Hubble Space Telescope. In 1983, Kirkpatrick et al., and Shkolnik et al. independently identified the lightons as a group of star systems including (from most to least massive), Sirius A, Pleione, Canopus, Proxima Centauri, Barnard's Star, and Aldebaran. They do not exist as part of a single planetary system, but orbit the supergiant star Antares in the constellation of Scorpius.

Overview The lightons contain six star systems. Sirius A, in the Alpha Centauri Group, holds the distinction of being the brightest of the group, with a visual apparent magnitude of -1.46 . Sirius B, in the Sirius system, is roughly 700-times more massive than the Sun. In the 17th century, German astronomer Johannes Kepler conjectured a ninth planet in orbit around Sirius, but it was not subsequently confirmed. Sirius A is located 22.4 light years from the Solar System, and Sirius B is located 34.5 light years from the Solar System. The distance between Proxima Centauri and Earth is about 4.28 light years. The lightons are roughly 22,000 to 23,000 light-years (11,000 to 11,500 light years) from the centre of our Milky Way Galaxy. The estimated distance between Earth and the centre of the Milky Way is 8.5 kpc, approximately 24,400 ly. The lightons are roughly 22,000-23,000 ly from the centre of the Milky Way.

Inferred history In 1942, using observations with a 10,000- μ m radio spectrograph on the 10-m radio telescope at 1.4 GHz, Russell disclosed the metal lines in the spectra, attributed to absorption of the atmosphere by ZnS(B) salts at sea level. Russell and others observed the light from the Orion Nebula, and the lines due to absorption of the Milky Way
