To present a case report on the initiation of next generation of sequential polychemotherapy in a patient with metastatic melanoma. Case report. Antitumor vaccination is a growing modality in patients with metastatic melanoma. The therapy combines the cell-mediated immunity and the development of specific antibodies. It stimulates the peripheral immune system with a minimal toxicity and a significant increase in patient survival. The patient developed meningeal and cerebral metastases, and the patient received adjuvant therapy with high-dose interleukin-2. As a second-line therapy, BMS-936558 (atezolizumab) was administered. Three months later, the patient initiated ipilimumab. On day 16 of the first cycle of ipilimumab, a control magnetic resonance imaging revealed a complete response. The patient completed 6 cycles of ipilimumab and had no recurrence or adverse event over a 9-year follow-up. The combination of cell-mediated immunity, peripheral lymphocytes, and specific antibodies may be a promising therapeutic approach that has not been included in the treatment protocol for patients with metastatic melanoma. This is the first case report presenting such therapy for a patient with metastatic melanoma.7 Pieces of Advice for Living Well as an EMBA Candidate This post is an excerpt from my personal blog, where I write about what it's like being an MBA candidate at a small, private business school. -1-
